

Closing Remarks
Integrated Health: Connecting Body and Mind
Robert Lee Sutherland Seminar XV
Tuesday, Sept. 9, 2008
2:00 p.m. – 2:30 p.m.

Octavio Martinez

As we come to the end of the Hogg Foundation's 15th Robert Lee Sutherland Seminar, I want to tell you that the discussion that was started here these past two days will not end here.

The foundation is committed to supporting Texas's movement toward integrated health care. It is the future of health care, and we will continue to invest our financial and intellectual resources in support of that future.

This fall, we will be using what we learned over the past day and a half to determine how we can best support this movement and the good work that is going on in Texas.

You will be hearing from us about our next steps. And I hope we will also hear from you about how your work in integrated health care develops. I know we will find ways to work with many of you on this important issue in the months ahead.

I would like to echo Dr. Alexander's thanks to all of you for participating in this stimulating conference and thank you for all the work you do to improve the health of Texans.
